

APRIL

Fool's day

Don't forget that the fun stops at midday. For anyone who plays a trick on someone else after midday is an April Fool himself!

April Fool's Day is celebrated on April the 1st in Great Britain and the USA. It is a day spent playing practical jokes and tricks, such as switching salt and sugar, setting the clocks to an incorrect time or sending people on meaningless errands.

Pinning paper fish on other people's backs without getting caught is not a typical April Fool's Day tradition in England or America.

Many names for the fool are used around the world. In England the person tricked is a «noddie» or a «gawby». In Scotland, the fool is called a «gawk» or a «cuckoo», but the most commonly used term is «April fool».
